- Acquisition of land, buildings, site preparation and improvements
- Construction of buildings
- Acquisition and installation of furnishings, fixtures and equipment
- Capitalizable soft costs (e.g., architectural and engineering, interest incurred during construction, cost associated with bond issuance, etc.)

Taxable IRBs have an interest rate equal to conventional loans and have no limit. Terms for both are normally 10-20 years and can finance up to 100% of the project costs. The principal and interest on the bonds are paid solely from the funds derived from leasing or selling the facilities to the user company. Under most circumstances, upon complete payment of the bond issue, the lessee or user company acquires ownership of the industrial facility for a nominal sum. Alabama’s state legislature enacted the Alabama Land Recycling and Economic Redevelopment Act (“ALRERA”) giving a statutory framework for “non-responsible” prospective purchasers and “responsible” owners to voluntarily assess and remediate contaminated property, including Brownfield’s, with confidence that no further cleanup would be required later. A “Brownfield” property is one where expansion, redevelopment or reuse is complicated by the presence or potential presence of a hazardous substance, pollutant or contaminant, according to the U.S. EPA. To advance economic incentives, the Alabama Brownfield Development Tax Abatement Act of 2004 enabled “private users” with approved voluntary cleanup plans to petition city or county government to abate non-educational city and county sales and use taxes and non-educational state, city and county property taxes for a period of up to 20 years. See details at the following site <https://revenue.alabama.gov/tax-incentives/major-tax-incentives/tax-abatements/> or Contact: Angela Till, Abatement Program Administrator with the Alabama Department of Revenue.
